

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention relates to an optical element that is to be mounted on a shaft, particularly a spindle shaft, in order to deflect a laser beam. The laser beam is deflected via a first and a second mirror surface. At least one additional surface is provided for reducing centrifugal forces and gyroscopic moments acting upon the shaft.--